Fort Leavenworth leaders, Child and Youth Services staff members and military families kicked off Month of the Military Child April 1 with a proclamation signing ceremony at Harrold Youth Center.

April was established as Month of Military Child by the Department of Defense in 1986. This year’s theme for the month is “Military Children and Youth: Building Stronger Character and Relationships.”

CYS Coordinator Carole Hoffman told the audience about the root reason for why month is celebrated.

“Each year, the Department of Defense joins national, state and local government; schools; military-serving organizations; and private citizens in celebrating military children and the sacrifices they make,” Hoffman told the audience. “Today there are more than 1.6 million military children who have one or both parents serving in uniform. That’s why we celebrate Month of the Military Child.”

Garrison Command Sgt. Maj. Vanessa Sun said what Month of the Military Child represents is important to her as a soldier — hers was a dual-military family prior to her husband’s recent retirement, and she pointed out that her 14-year-old daughter, who was attending the ceremony with her, has moved eight times in her lifetime.

“To the kids in here, thank you for being so resilient,” Sun said.

Garrison Commander Col. Duane Mosier asked the children assembled for the ceremony how many times they had moved, starting at more than three times with many hands in the air to a few hands raised among the young group for eight moves.

“Every one of you has moved a lot, right? So, when you talk about that in context of what a ‘normal,’ small-town America experience is ... that’s rare,” Mosier told the children. “When we talk about sacrifice, well, that’s part of it. You’re not growing up in an average, small-town America experience. Now with that comes great benefits, but also sacrifices. The reality is you are having to change your environment, you’re having to change your friendships, you’re having to change your schools, change your teachers, change all of these things.”

Mosier pointed out that he heard one of the children answer “Sacrifices?” more as a guess rather than a statement when asked what it means to be a military child.

“That demonstrates the strength of the military child — they’re not bothered by it. You have resiliency,” Mosier said. “You’re able to go through these challenges and think it is an amazing adventure. And that’s what this month is about – it’s acknowledging and recognizing what you go through is truly unique — it absolutely is unique — and sometimes it means sacrifice, and sometimes it means it is an amazing adventure.”

Mosier told the children that they are living a life that very few people in the country and around the world get to experience, acknowledging the sacrifice that comes with it, but also the benefits of that experience that he encouraged them to embrace. He said the designated month was a chance for the children to know they are seen and those sacrifices and that experience is acknowledged.

“We want to make sure that we see you, and understand what you are experiencing,” he said. “That’s what we are doing here today — just to see you and understand you and let you know that we care about you, and we’re going to protect you as the treasures of America.”

During the ceremony, the Leavenworth High School Junior ROTC Color Guard — comprised of Cadet Staff Sgt. Kenneth Kramer II, Color Guard Commander Cadet Sgt. 1st Class Alexis Hoffman, Cadet Cpl. Madeleine Alexander and Cadet Pvt. Emily Kramer — presented the colors, and sixth-grader Benjamin Shumaker sang the national anthem. Eighth-grader Maddy Genge read the proclamation aloud, followed by the signing of the proclamation by Mosier and Sun. Genge and Alexis Hoffman, as Harrold Youth Center representatives, and fourth-grader Olivia Drouin and fifth-grader Saraphim Isbell, as Osage School-Age Center representatives, also added their signatures to the document.

CYS has many activities planned throughout April to celebrate Month of the Military Child. See the MOMC calendar featured with this article, the Post Notes section of the Fort Leavenworth Lamp each week for event information, and the Child and Youth Services Facebook page for updates.

Army honors MOMC by Purpling Up

by Shannon Collins/Army News Service

WASHINGTON – This year, in honor of the Month of the Military Child in April, the assistant secretary of the Army for Manpower and Reserve Affairs encourages everyone to wear purple to show their support for military children.

“Military children experience unique challenges, which they navigate with dignity and resilience, often well beyond their years,” said Jenna Shell, assistant deputy, child and youth programs, assistant secretary of the Army, Manpower and Reserve Affairs, Pentagon. “The Army is committed to taking care of military families and children. The support and contributions made by military children on behalf of their soldiers makes our all-volunteer Army stronger.”

Armywide at installations around the world, civilians and military personnel and children wear purple, which demonstrates support and celebrates the military youth and children.

“I’m an Army brat. I had a very traditional growing up experience in the Army,” said Sgt. Maj. of the Army Michael R. Weimer during his recent special guest appearance on the Integrated Personnel and Pay System-Army Podcast. “My father (served) about 27 years in the Army, lots of moves, three overseas assignments for a total of nine years, and a lot of schools.”

Weimer describes his childhood as a traditional military child experience and contributes the resiliency he learned to his successful 30 years in the Special Forces community.

Statistics show that military children are twice as likely to join the military. The term military brat dates to the 1920s when British troops traveled with British Regiment Attached Travelers (BRAT), referring to being accompanied by families. BRAT was adopted to recognize the children of those troops.

These statistics show that throughout the Department of Defense, the military family moves six to nine times during a school career from kindergarten to 12th grade, which is an average frequency of three times more than non-military families. Currently, more than 1.7 million children have one or more parents on active duty in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Every April since 1986, the Month of the Military Child is observed and celebrated at Army installations worldwide, recognizing the tenacity and resilience of military children who support the soldiers of the Army’s ready and lethal warfighting force.

“The Army is committed to providing a safe and nurturing environment for our military children, so our soldiers have peace of mind, remain ready to serve, and continue as a strong fighting force,” Shell said. “Mission readiness depends on a strong and resilient home front.”

The Month of the Military Child recognizes Army children because they play a key role in supporting their parents, the mission and the nation.

PROCLAMATION

SEXUAL ASSAULT AWARENESS AND PREVENTION MONTH
APRIL 2025

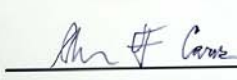

April is Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month in the United States Army. Here at the Combined Arms Center (CAC) and Fort Leavenworth, we treat every month as Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month. Sexual assault and sexual harassment represent a direct threat to our CAC and Fort Leavenworth team, including our family members, community partners, and violates our core Army values. This year's Army Sexual Assault Awareness Prevention Month theme is: “STEP FORWARD. Prevent. Report. Advocate.”

This year's theme emphasizes building an Army culture rooted in safety and respect for all Soldiers, Families, and Army Civilians. Throughout Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month (SAAPM) and beyond, we invite every member of the CAC and Fort Leavenworth community to tap into their individual collective strength to play a vital role in preventing and responding to sexual harassment and assault.

To promote a culture of safety and respect, the newly released Army Regulation 600-52 establishes the first standalone policy for the Sexual Harassment/Assault Response and Prevention (SHARP) program. This updated policy enhances prevention efforts, implements a new professionalized SHARP workforce model, reduces barriers to reporting, and improves advocacy for victims. By protecting our personnel, we ultimately strengthen the Army as whole.

For more information on Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month or to make restricted or unrestricted reports of sexual assault, Soldiers, Family Members 18 yrs or older, and DA Civilians can call the Fort Leavenworth SHARP Hotline at 913-683-1443 or stop by the Fort Leavenworth SHARP Resource Center at 632 McClellan Avenue, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. Additional support is available through the Department of Defense Safe Helpline at 877-995-5247.

Therefore, the Command Team of the Combined Arms Center hereby proclaim April 2025 to be Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month! We charge all Fort Leavenworth military members, Department of Defense Civilians, Family Members, and Contractors to take responsibility to maintain high standards, treat others with dignity and respect, and to STEP FORWARD. and Gen. Carsten Breuer, inspector general of the bundeswehr, chief of defence, German Armed Forces, CGSOC Class of 2002.

The four join more than 300 other international officers in the IHOF.

The IHOF has been recognizing international officer alumni of the highest merit since 1973.

The hall of fame represents international officers who have returned to their home countries and risen to the highest position of uniformed leadership within their respective defense forces.

This class of inductees represents experts in security and diplomacy, and transformation and readiness of U.S. partner nations’ military forces.

Inductees reflected on the leadership skills learned as CGSOC students that have driven their careers while also emphasizing the withstanding power of the interpersonal piece of their educations.

Bahraini Dr. Abdullatif bin Rashid Al Zayani

Al Zayani is one of only two Bahraini graduates in the IHOF.

He achieved the pinnacle of his career in his current position in 2020.

Combined Arms Center and Fort Leavenworth Commanding General and CGSC Commandant Lt. Gen. Milford H. Beagle Jr. said Al Zayani has created a career of the highest scholarship and service, receiving the sword of honor and title of Master Logistician upon his CGSOC graduation in 1988.

“He has used his knowledge as a powerful tool to develop both military and civilians alike. As an esteemed educator, Dr. Al Zayani has mentored and inspired future generations at some of the top institutions across the world,” Beagle said. “His influence is seen not just in the lessons he’s taught but in the leaders that he’s empowered.”

Al Zayani said the foundational lessons of command and control, initiative, depth and agility are all skills he was able to nurture during his time as a student.

“Throughout the 37 years since graduating from this prestigious college, I have worked to implement the principles and values I learned here at Fort Leavenworth. I have sought to use the fruits of this education to advocate for regional and global peace and security, particularly the need for genuine international cooperation and partnerships to tackle critical issues and to foster true peace security and stability,” he said.

With his induction, Al Zayani expressed his re-commitment to focus on implementing knowledge to apply effective leadership skills to continue to make a lasting impression of global peace and security.

Italian Gen. Lucian Portolano

Gen. Lucian Portolano earned his current career apex title in October 2024.

“He has commanded at every possible level and served in a variety of critical operational and institutional support assignments in support of national, NATO and United Nations requirements,” Beagle said.

Portolano’s current position and career experience has allowed him to generate critical transformation and readiness for the Italian Armed Forces.

While sharing with Al Zayani the significance of the professional development, Portolano included the impact the interpersonal aspects of his time as a CGSOC student were nearly as important.

“All the colleagues with whom I shared this significant experience, the relationships and their friendships I built here have represented, without any doubt, values that contributed to my professional growth and development of what I consider effective leadership,” Portolano said.

He further explained that many of the relationships forged during the “Best Year of His Life” have been invaluable during his career, creating professional touchpoints that have played vital roles in decisions.

He also encouraged members of the current CGSOC class, who attended the ceremony, to consider and hold fast to the non-traditional lessons CGSOC provides.

“In order to efficiently operate in such context, a true leader must possess a dynamic attitude. He or she has to be able to see and look beyond; think and judge quickly, adaptively and decisively,” Portolano said. “I would say outside books, in this perspective, the lessons and experiences I gained during my time spent here been precious references to me.”

Retired Australian Lt. Gen. Gregory Bilton

Retired Lt. Gen. Gregory Bilton joined one other Australian IHOF inductee.

Bilton achieved his current career honor in June 2019.

Throughout his career, he has held notable national security positions of leadership, as well as taught at the Australian Command and Staff College.

“General Bilton’s ability to lead, to adapt and to mentor has left a lasting impression on the force and the people who serve within it,” Beagle said. “His extensive operational leadership reflects General Bilton’s deep sense of duty and ability to build strong teams in the toughest of environments.”

Bilton talked about the current highly contested operational environments that not only he and his fellow inductees command in, but those that the students in attendance will be leading forces in upon graduation.

The blended classrooms of international and U.S. military students were invaluable additions to his time at CGSOC, Bilton said. He encouraged the current class to lean into those secondary educational opportunities.

“Where else in the world was I going to get that sort of exposure? Where else in the world was I going to share those sorts of insights? That professional military development was important, but the relationships, the insights, the experience, the diversity that existed in my class were the real gifts,” he said.

German Gen. Carsten Breuer

Gen. Carsten Breuer reached his current position in March 2023.

“He has demonstrated remarkable range and flexible leadership that enabled him to lead in academic and policy formulation organization and diverse commands,” said Beagle, a 2002 CGSOC classmate of Breuer.

Breuer is the ninth German inductee to the IHOF.

Like his fellow inductees, Breuer reflected on the power of the friendships and perspective learning within the classrooms.

He also explained that the class of 2002 faced a historically defining moment for America — the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks on the United States.

“The memory of the lessons we learned in the classroom may fade over time, but the trust and the understanding, the friendship we build, especially during those demanding times, they endure,” Breuer said.

Following the ceremony, each inductee was shown the IHOF where their photos will hang with the rest of the portraits in the Lewis and Clark Center. The IHOF is a highlight for visitors to Army University and symbolizes the dedication to military excellence and the quality critical joint force education delivered at CGSC.

National Medal of Honor Museum opens, highlights courage of generations of soldiers

Medal of Honor recipients and distinguished guests participate in the grand opening of the National Medal of Honor Museum March 22 in Arlington, Texas. The museum pays tribute to those service members who received the military’s highest award for bravery and valor.

by Shannon Collins, Army News Service

ARLINGTON, Texas – As Lee Greenwood belted out “God Bless the USA,” 32 of the 61 living Medal of Honor recipients, national and military leaders, celebrities and musical guests celebrated the official opening of the National Medal of Honor Museum March 22 during a ribbon-cutting ceremony in Arlington’s entertainment district.

“Cutting the ribbon to open the National Medal of Honor Museum was the realization of a long-awaited moment,” said retired Army Maj. Gen. Patrick H. Brady, MOH recipient and member of the national MOH Museum Foundation Board of Directors. “The Medal of Honor and its recipients will now have a proper home, where the values of courage, sacrifice and patriotism will be preserved and shared with future generations of Americans.”

He said the board has been trying to make the MOH museum a realization for 30 years.

“This medal – and this museum – are for those I served with, especially the ones who never came home,” Brady said. “I hope that visitors will learn from our stories and see that they, too, have it within themselves to do something great for others and make a positive impact on our country.”

Brady received the Medal of Honor for his service in Vietnam, using helicopters to rescue wounded men from enemy territory. His story is among more than 3,500 now housed at the museum.

“It’s as humbling as it gets tonight,” said Capt. Florent Groberg, a medal recipient recognized for his actions as a Task Force Mountain Warrior in Afghanistan in 2012. “I want this museum to be a clear reminder of what it took and continues to take to be this country. These are storylines of ordinary, common Americans who rose to the question of ‘Will you serve?’”

A Huey helicopter, flown by Medal of Honor recipient retired U.S. Army Maj. Gen. Patrick Brady, is on display at the National Medal of Honor Museum in Arlington, Texas. Brady named the helicopter after his wife, Nancy Lee.

Retired Col. Jack Jacobs, who was awarded the Medal of Honor for his actions during the Vietnam War, said he wants museum visitors to realize the recipients aren’t “spectacular supermen” but regular people who “embody the kinds of values that are really important.”

When his unit was ambushed by the Viet Cong on March 9, 1968, Jacobs took charge after his commander was seriously wounded. Despite being wounded in the head by shrapnel and bleeding heavily, Jacobs reorganized the company and repeatedly ran through enemy fire to rescue the wounded, saving the lives of a U.S. adviser and 13 soldiers.

Jacobs, now 79, said he lost a lot of friends in the battle.

“You really do wear the award for all of the people who can’t wear the award,” he said.

Medal of Honor recipient retired Maj. Gen. Patrick Brady speaks at Clemson University during the school’s Military Appreciation Week Oct. 31, 2019, in South Carolina. Brady spoke to ROTC cadets, the football team, donated some books to Clemson’s archives, and participated in Military Appreciation Day events. Brady received the nation’s highest award for valor for actions Near Chu Lai, Republic of Vietnam, Jan. 6, 1968, as the pilot of a UH-1H ambulance helicopter, known as a “Dustoff.” Over the course of many hours, Brady used three helicopters (after the first two were rendered inoperable because of damage from enemy fire) to evacuate 51 seriously wounded men, many of whom would have died without prompt medical treatment.

Ribbon cutting

The U.S. Army Strings, U.S. Army Herald Trumpets, “The President’s Own” Marine Chamber Orchestra and U.S. Air Force Ceremonial Brass performed as the 32 MOH recipients, former President George W. Bush, NBC Today Show anchor Savannah Guthrie, actor Gary Sinise, Dallas Cowboys’ quarterback Dak Prescott and tight end Jake Ferguson, former NFL player Zach Martin and other prominent guests attended the grand opening of the museum after a three-year construction effort.

“We need our young people to know about character and perseverance and selflessness,” Sinise said.

Following the ribbon cutting, the Mission to Inspire Spectacular lit up the sky with fireworks and drones, accompanied by video and a variety of musical arrangements, to commemorate the milestone in a 360-degree storytelling marvel.

Since the Civil War, the Medal of Honor has been awarded by Congress to less than 4,000 of the 40 million Americans who have served in the armed forces who risked their lives in combat beyond the call of duty.

Grand opening

The elevated exhibit deck, held aloft by five concrete mega-columns representing the branches of the armed forces, features 31,000 square feet of the artifacts, interviews and legacies of those who have received the country's highest award for valor in combat.

This $270 million, 100,000-square-foot museum is the only one in the nation devoted to sharing the stories of more than 500 recipients of the Medal of Honor, America’s highest military decoration for valor in combat.

Veterans had the opportunity to visit the museum for free March 25 during its grand opening.

“I’m here because (the museum) is about people that did things that were a little unusual,” said Bill Brown, an 86-year-old Army veteran who served in 1963 in Korea. “They did some things that were above and beyond.”

Jack Morrison, a 78-year-old-Vietnam Army veteran, waited with the crowd at the museum’s doors, listening to live brass band marching tunes. He said he kept looking up at the gray obelisk floating above him that holds the museum’s exhibits.

He stood with his cousin, Vietnam Air Force veteran John James, 79, and his son, Jon Morrison, a 40-year-old Marine veteran who served in 2004 and is now a police officer.

The collection

The collection includes the first MOH ever presented, which went to Army 1st Lt. Jacob Parrott, who served in the Civil War.

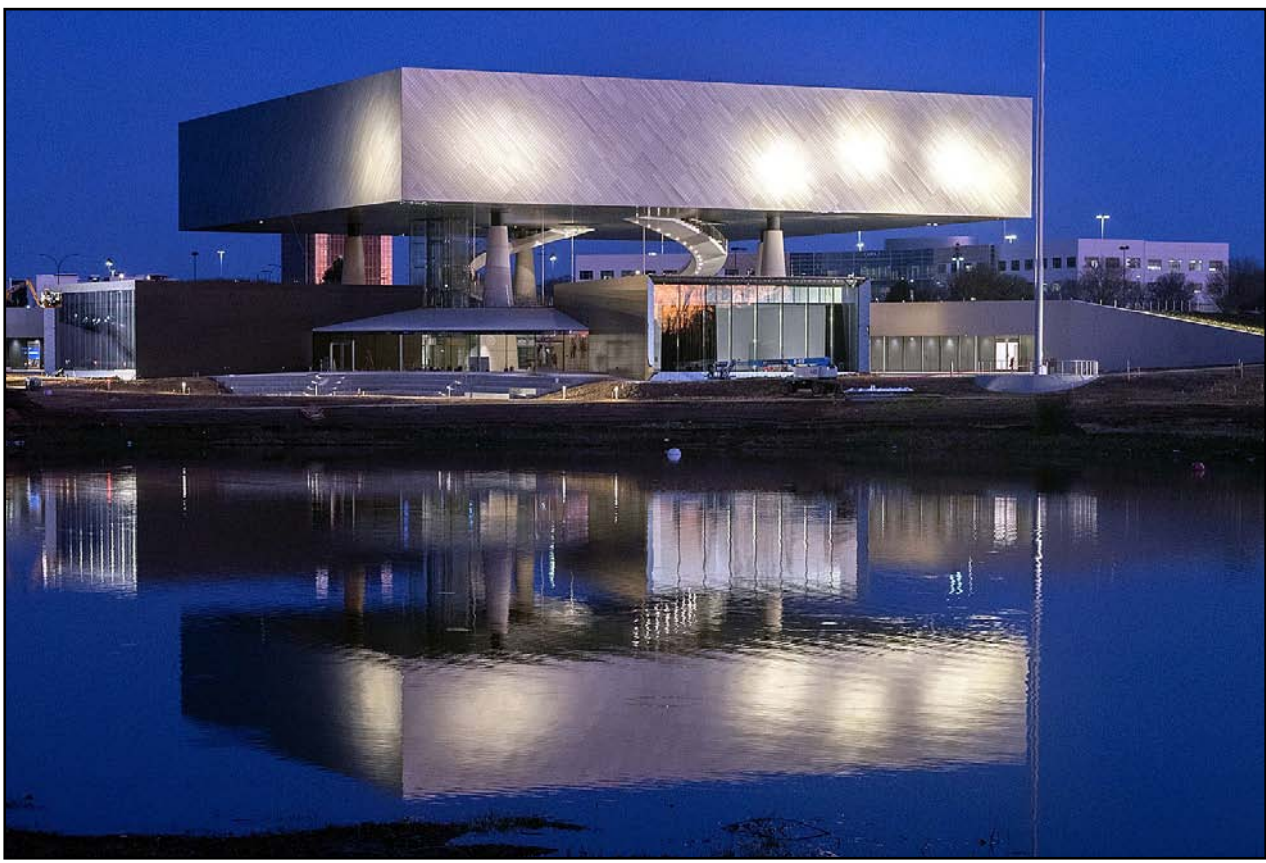

The museum features five different interactive exhibits. The Ring of Valor encircles visitors as they walk through the front door. Five exterior pillars represent each branch of the armed forces.

In one square acre, museum visitors can see courage and patriotism on display. The museum boasts an impressive collection of artifacts, from battle and dress uniforms of recipients to flags, dog tags, family photos and firearms dating back to World War I.

The walls are covered in photos of recipients and display cases filled with Medals of Honor, guns and letters. Exhibits feature journals, weapons, uniforms and trinkets belonging to recipients.

“We do go all the way back to the Civil War, but our focus has been post-World War I,” said Alexandra Rhue, senior vice president of museum engagement and strategic initiatives. “We want to have that personal connection where you knew someone who could have served in that conflict.”

While the museum tells tales of war, its creators wanted to make clear that it's not just another war museum — it's a biography museum focused on shared values highlighted through stories of courage, sacrifice, commitment, integrity, citizenship and patriotism.

Instead of grouping the recipients by conflict, their stories are interspersed throughout the museum.

Two of the museum's corners have 50-foot projection screens, which showcase war landscapes from the jungles of Guadalcanal to the frozen mountaintops of Korea. Each scene includes portals visitors can enter to learn more about various recipients from those eras.

Off the main gallery, visitors can gain perspective by stepping into the world of the Vietnam-era "Dustoff" — rapid helicopter medical evacuation missions during the war.

"You can put on a headset, and you can jump into the seat of a 1968 UH-1H Iroquois Huey helicopter," Rhue explained. "You'll be able to make rapid-fire decisions to either bring people home safely to base or potentially have a hard landing in the jungle ... to bring you into those really difficult decision-making experiences."

Thanks to cutting-edge audiovisual technology, visitors can physically step into time to hear Army Chief Warrant Officer 4 Michael Novosel Sr. and others tell their stories.

Just steps away, visitors can get a close-up look at the prominently displayed "Nancy Lee," a Huey helicopter that Brady used to rescue soldiers in Vietnam in 1968. The helicopter is named in honor of his late wife.

To highlight as many recipients as possible, the displays will rotate over the years as new recipients are awarded, more artifacts are collected and others on loan are returned.

There's also the interactive theater, where AI technology allows recipients to talk virtually with visitors. The recipients chosen for the project recorded more than 700 responses to potential questions, from their favorite ice cream, to what it was like growing up, to their combat experience and what they want their legacy to be.

"(There are) some really deep, as well as some really accessible, entry points for our visitors to have conversations," Rhue said.

The museum came together with the help of several veterans, including five Medal of Honor recipients who served on its board.

They all understood that the smallest details mattered, from the language to the uniforms.

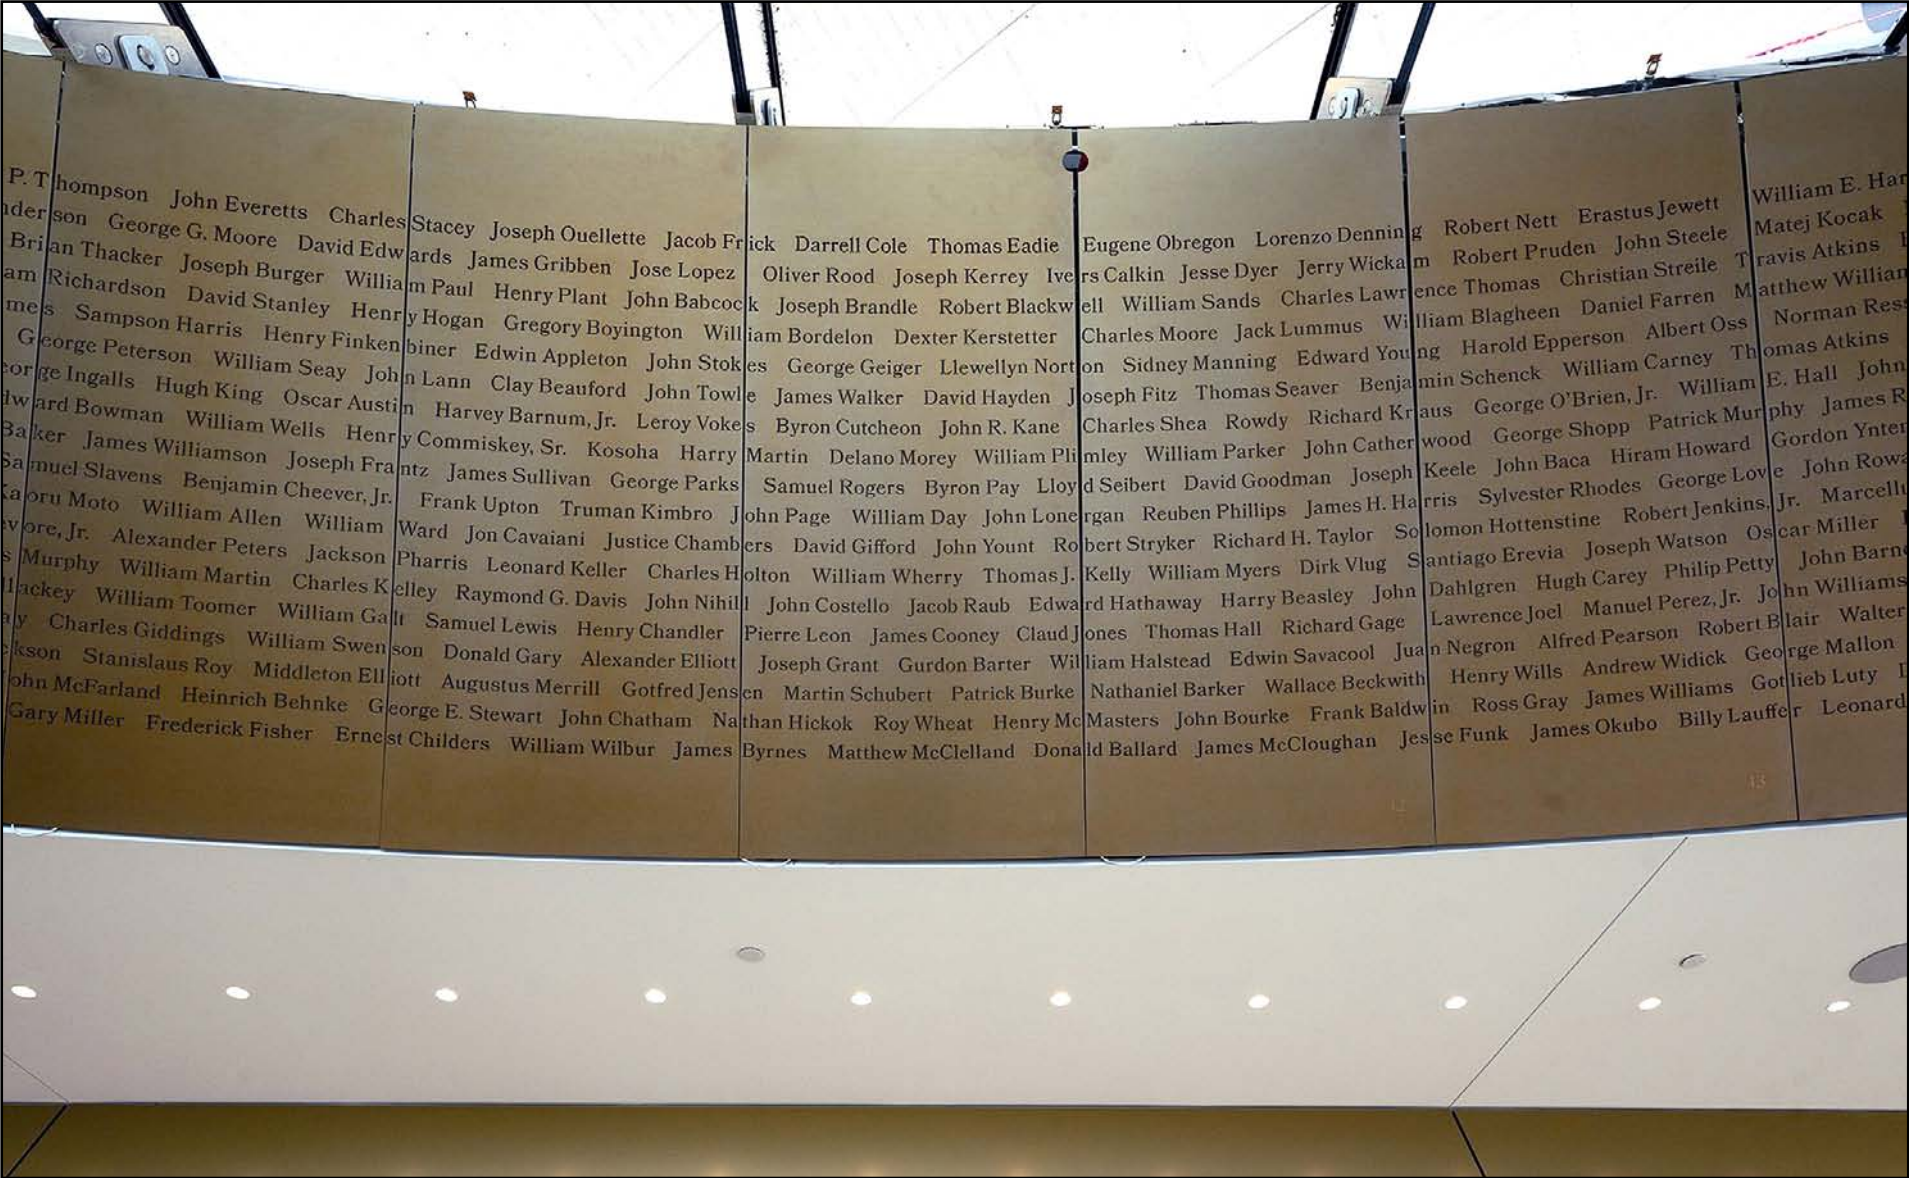

"We really want people to be inspired by what they see here more than anything else," Rhue said.

The museum

The museum, located at 1861 AT&T Way, Arlington, Texas, is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week. General admission costs $30. The museum is expected to attract more than 800,000 visitors annually.

The museum’s ground-level rotunda, which has the names of all medal recipients engraved on its ceiling, will be open 24/7.

Motorcycle safety courses offered by Fort Leavenworth Safety Office

Service members, and Department of Defense civilians if space allows, can now sign up for Motorcycle Safety courses scheduled for April through October.

The Motorcycle Safety Foundation (MSF) courses are exclusively for active-duty personnel, and DoD civilians on a standby basis, who are assigned to Fort Leavenworth. Retirees, family members and contractors are not permitted to participate.

This season, Fort Leavenworth has a total of 69 allotments for the Basic Rider Course and 39 allotments for the Advance Rider Course.

The MSF classes are limited to six students, and a minimum of five students must be registered for a class to take place, otherwise, it will be canceled.

Before registering, participants must obtain their commander's or supervisor's approval and bring the signed operator agreement to the first day of training.

If you register for a course and do not attend without prior notice, which causes an allocation to be lost, you will not be allowed to sign up for a future course this season.

How to enroll:

- Go to CAC-enabled website <https://airs.safety.army.mil>
- Click on "I ACCEPT"
- Under the heading you will find, Region, Garrison and Courses
- Using the down arrow choose the following:
 - Region "West"
 - Garrison "Fort Leavenworth"
 - Courses: Choose the course that you want to enroll in. (Basic Rider Course or Advanced Rider Course)
- Click on calendar icon or "Next Month" to select dates and courses if course is full for that month. (NOTE: Grayed-out courses are past; courses in red are filled; courses in blue are available.)
- Click the desired date of course to enroll and follow the instruction. (Please read "Course Detail" for qualification/requirements, date and time of the course.)

After passing the Old U.S. Disciplinary Barracks, turn right onto Bluntville Avenue. and proceed down the hill to Sherman Army Airfield on the right. Cross the railroad tracks into the parking lot. Look for the Motorcycle Safety Classroom sign on the building to identify the correct location. During training days, MSF training signs will be posted along the route.

Student report time is 6:45 a.m. on the scheduled start day for processing. Since all students either work or live on Fort Leavenworth, they are asked to complete a reconnaissance of the classroom before to the start date. Additionally, one week prior to the start of training, the safety officer will send an email reminder that will include a strip map to the training classroom. You are invited to a Distinguished Speaker Series dinner event on April 2, 2025.

Reception at 5:30 p.m. • Buffet Dinner at 6 p.m. • Presentation at 7 p.m.

Our current world is filled with friction within and between countries. There are conflicts on every continent on Earth besides Australia and Antarctica. The success of our nation is reliant upon our ability to train well-formed, ethical leaders to navigate the complexities of this dynamic environment. In this installment of our Distinguished Speaker Series, Dr. Paul D. Miller, CGSC Foundation's General Hugh Shelton Distinguished Visiting Chair of Ethics, is joined by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Derek M. Pottinger, instructor of ethics and world religions at CGSC, in a discussion of Miller's latest book, Ethics of War: A Short Companion. In the book, Miller discusses just war tradition and the contemporary challenges of the changing shape of modern warfare and offers insight on how to counsel soldiers, elected officials, and citizens in response.

Dr. Paul David Miller, Ph.D., is a political theorist and political scientist focusing on international affairs, the American experiment, and America's role in the world. He is a professor of the practice of international affairs at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service. He serves as co-chair of the Global Politics and Security concentration in the Master of Science in the Foreign Service program. He is also a non-resident senior fellow with the Atlantic Council's Scowcroft Center for Strategy and Security. He assumed the role of the CGSC Foundation's General Hugh Shelton Distinguished Visiting Chair of Ethics in February 2025. As a practitioner, Dr. Miller served as director for Afghanistan and Pakistan on the National Security Council staff; worked as an intelligence analyst for the Central Intelligence Agency; and served as a military intelligence officer in the U.S. Army. Miller has authored several books, has been published in multiple journals, and is a contributing editor of Providence: A Journal of Christianity and American Foreign Policy. Miller holds a doctorate in international relations and a bachelor's in government from Georgetown University, and a master in public policy from Harvard University.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Derek M. Pottinger is an ethics and world religions instructor at the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College. He has served 19 years as an active duty Army chaplain. Since 2006, he's served as battalion chaplain for infantry, support, combined arms, and engineer battalions (including two deployments to Iraq 2007-2009 and 2010-2011); brigade chaplain for 3rd Recruiting Brigade (2014-2015); the ethics instructor/curriculum writer at the U.S. Army Fires Center of Excellence's Field Artillery School (2016-2020); group chaplain for the 10th Support Group, Okinawa, Japan (2020-2022); and garrison chaplain, Fort Riley, Kansas (2022-2024). Pottinger holds a Master of Theology in ethics and public policy from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, a Master of Divinity in General Ministries from Lincoln Christian University, and a master's in theology, and a bachelor's in Christian ministries from Cincinnati Christian University. He is endorsed by the Christian Churches and Churches of Christ's Chaplaincy Endorsement Commission.
