2 Army legends inducted into Hall of Fame

by Sgt. 1st Class Summer Woode/Combined Arms Center Public Affairs

Two trailblazing Army leaders were inducted into the Fort Leavenworth Hall of Fame May 28 at the Lewis and Clark Center.

Brig. Gen. Henry J. Hunt, a Civil War artillery pioneer, and retired Col. Gregory Fontenot, a modern combat commander and scholar, were recognized for their exceptional service and enduring connection to the Army's legacy of leadership and education.

"We couldn't find two greater Americans, soldiers and leaders who shaped our Army," said Lt. Gen. Milford H. Beagle Jr., commanding general of the Combined Arms Center and Fort Leavenworth. "Today we honor not just what they did, but what they gave — and what still endures."

Brig. Gen. Henry J. Hunt

Hunt's connection to Fort Leavenworth began in 1827, when he accompanied his father, an officer in the 3rd Infantry Regiment, on the original expedition to establish the post. Decades later, he returned to command Company M, 2nd U.S. Artillery during a volatile period in Kansas, providing security for polling stations during the 1857 territorial elections. But his legacy extended far beyond the gates of Fort Leavenworth.

Selected as one of three officers to serve on the Army's Light Artillery Board, Hunt co-authored "The Instructions for Field Artillery" in 1861. This manual became the Union Army's official artillery doctrine throughout the Civil War and remains one of the most significant contributions to U.S. military field tactics of that era.

"He wasn't just leading artillery," Beagle said. "He was rewriting how we used it."

Hunt's leadership proved decisive at key battles such as Malvern Hill and Gettysburg. At Malvern Hill in 1862, he massed 60 artillery batteries — more than 240 guns — and inflicted more than 5,500 casualties in less than eight hours, forcing Confederate

SAMS graduates next generation of leaders

by Jessica Brushwood/Army University Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army School of Advanced Military Studies conducted a graduation and academic honors ceremony to recognize its 42nd cohort May 22 at the Lewis and Clark Center.

SAMS, which "converts intellectual power into combat power," granted master's degrees to 129 students representing the total Army, the joint force, 11 allied partner nations and several federal agencies.

Guest speaker Lt. Gen. Milford Beagle Jr., commanding general of the Combined Arms Center and commandant of Command and General Staff College, graduated from SAMS in 2003.

Beagle emphasized the complex challenges that come with a rapidly changing operational environment yet assured the graduates they are now prepared for what comes next.

"I have not met a planner yet, produced through SAMS, who would cringe at any of those problem sets. Thou shall not say that's a wicked problem without bringing a wicked solution," Beagle said.

His words of wisdom, taped under each graduate's seat, touched on three points and concluded with a challenge.

"Leadership is not a position. It is not a rank. It is not a title. It is a choice. Make an impact. Make a difference. Every single day," Beagle said.

SAMS Director Col. Dwight Domengeaux Jr. said the graduates will help commanders in the operational force to understand, visualize, describe, direct, lead and assess operations in a complex environment and create war-winning solutions, today and into the future.

"The academic year 2025 SAMS graduates from each of the school's three programs are warrior scholars, preparing to meet the highest priority security needs of our nation and those of our allies," he said.

Academic rigor and student performance are prioritized at SAMS, demonstrated by highlighting the top 30 percent among the master's level Advanced Military Studies and the Advanced Strategic Leadership Studies programs.

Awards were presented

Roadmap to Revolution Part 3:

1775 - The Birth of the Continental Army, Battle of Bunker Hill

by Walter Napier/Combined Arms
Center Deputy Command Historian

Editor’s note: This is the third article in a series about major events of the American War for Independence as part of the celebration of the United States’ Semiquincentennial, which occurs in 2026, and this year’s 250th anniversary of the U.S. Army.

When British Maj. Gen. Sir Thomas Gage sent his soldiers to Concord, Massachusetts, his strategic goal was to stop the Massachusetts militia from being able to mount a credible defense and halt the spread of any armed resistance. After the disastrous retreat from Concord, however, the opposite happened. Immediately following the Battles of Lexington and Concord, Massachusetts militiamen established a cordon around Boston, and volunteer forces from the four New England colonies (Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Massachusetts) poured into the area to isolate the British.

Despite growing support for the cause, the New England volunteers faced the problems of organization and command. Artemas Ward, the Massachusetts commander, informally exercised control of the force, but all real decisions were made by a council of the various volunteer commanders. With the Siege of Boston ongoing, the Second Continental Congress called its meeting in Philadelphia, while the British recovered and awaited reinforcements. The war entered a stand-off while each side of the conflict worked on what action to take next.

U.S. ARMY’S 250th ANNIVERSARY

The Continental Army is the direct precursor to the United States Army, and June 14 is celebrated as the Army Birthday. 2025 marks the 250th birthday of the United States Army, and since then the Army has stood as the backbone of America’s strength in peace and war.

In May, a small number of British reinforcements arrived, along with three officers who would play major roles in war — William Howe, Henry Clinton and John Burgoyne. After surveying the field, the British decided to fortify Dorchester Heights to the south of Boston to establish positions to break the siege. In response, the colonials moved onto the Charlestown Peninsula north of the city.

Meanwhile in Philadelphia, the Second Continental Congress established itself as the defacto government of the colonies while they resisted the British. The members were uncertain on an end state to the conflict, but they recognized war was no longer a possibility but a fact. On June 14, 1775, the Congress officially created the Continental Army and called for recruitment of rifle companies from Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland to add to the New England force.

The Continental Army is the direct precursor to the United States Army, and June 14 is celebrated as the Army Birthday. 2025 marks the 250th birthday of the United States Army, and since then the Army has stood as the backbone of America’s strength in peace and war.

Following the creation of the force, George Washington was charged with drawing up rules and regulations for the Army. On the following day, he was selected to serve as the commander of “all the continental forces, raised or to be raised, for the defense of American liberty.” Despite some early mistakes, Washington proved himself an able commander during the French and Indian War — most notably during the disastrous march of Gen. Edward Braddock. During the march, Washington, suffering from dysentery, worked with then Lt. Col. Thomas Gage to stabilize the column after Braddock had been mortally wounded. Washington had since retained a sterling reputation leading to his selection, and his first mission was to move into Massachusetts and take control of forces there.

Before Washington could arrive, however, on the night of June 16, 1775, an American working party set out to fortify Bunker Hill and decided instead to focus its defensive works on Breed’s Hill. When the British awoke the following day, they decided to take the battle to the Americans and break their position. Gen. Howe landed on Charleston Peninsula under the protection of British warships with 2,200 men. The British had expected the fortifications made by militia to be less than satisfactory and chose to attack the American position directly.

On the afternoon of June 17, 1775, Howe arranged his men in columns of four on the left flank of Breed’s Hill. The Americans, whose shot and powder were limited, were told to hold their fire until the British moved within roughly 50 yards and purposely targeted officers when possible. The directed volley shocked the British regulars, and Howe himself took control and commanded the attack. The British regulars were attempting to take a reinforced and elevated position from a determined enemy. The Americans pushed the British back twice, forcing Howe to disengage and reorganize before attacking again. By the third attack, the Americans were running low on ammunition. This led to Connecticut Gen. Israel “Old Put” Putnam’s famous order not to “fire until you see the white of their eyes!”

The British finally took the hill on their third assault. The desperate hand-to-hand struggle resulted in fighting retreat to Bunker Hill and then an evacuation of the position altogether. Despite the tactical loss to the Americans, Bunker Hill proved to be a Pyrrhic victory (a win at too high a cost) for the British. The British and American reverted roughly to their June 16 positions. Howe’s 2,200 men suffered horrendously with a reported 1,054 casualties (226 killed/828 wounded). This proved to be one of the bloodiest battles of the war for the British and is particularly notable for the loss of British officers — Bunker Hill casualties represented one-eighth of all British officers killed and one-sixth of all officers wounded during the course of the war. Despite American losses of 441 (140 killed/301 wounded), morale in the colonial camp soared. The Americans had successfully stood against the British twice, and now Washington and reinforcements were on the way.

Post conducts full-scale exercise

Fort Leavenworth Fire and Emergency Services firefighters practice life-saving first response on a volunteer role player while members of the Combined Arms Center Law Enforcement Activity team and Department of the Army Police secure an area as part of a full-scale exercise May 29 at Frontier Chapel. The exercise centered on an active-shooter scenario and provided valuable training to emergency services personnel while validating crisis response procedures within the post's Emergency Operations Center. The Garrison Command Team and key staff sections who took part in the exercise will use the information learned in the exercise to update emergency and crisis response plans. "Full-scale emergency response exercises are critical to mission readiness — they validate contingency plans, enhance joint interoperability and ensure that all personnel can execute their roles decisively under pressure," Fort Leavenworth Garrison Public Affairs Officer Scott Gibson said. "These exercises turn doctrine and plans into action and prepare the installation to respond with discipline and precision in real-world crises."

Hall of Fame

Shadowboxes honoring retired Col. Gregory Fontenot, left, and Brevet Brig. Gen. Henry J. Hunt, right, are displayed following their induction into the Fort Leavenworth Hall of Fame May 28 at the Lewis and Clark Center. The Hall of Fame exhibit commemorates each inductee's significant contributions to the U.S. Army and the Fort Leavenworth legacy.

Gen. Robert E. Lee to defeat. At Gettysburg, Hunt’s centralized control of artillery fire played a crucial role in halting Pickett’s Charge and securing Union victory.

Dr. Thomas Bradbeer, associate professor of military leadership at the Command and General Staff College, accepted the honor on Hunt’s behalf and reflected on the general’s legacy as both a mentor and military innovator.

“He was not only a hero from my home state,” Bradbeer said. “He was a great Army officer and a phenomenal leader. His legacy lives in every artillery officer who came after him.”

Following the Civil War, Hunt continued to shape artillery practices as president of the Permanent Artillery Board before retiring to serve veterans at the Soldier’s Home in Washington, D.C., where he was eventually laid to rest in 1889.

Retired Col. Gregory Fontenot

In contrast to Hunt’s 19th-century battlefield innovations, retired Col. Gregory Fontenot represents the Army’s modern evolution. A distinguished military graduate from Kansas State University, Fontenot began his Army career in 1971 as an armor officer and quickly rose to lead troops on the frontlines of history.

During Operation Desert Storm, Fontenot commanded the 2nd Battalion, 34th Armored Regiment, 1st Infantry Division, which spearheaded one of the most decisive armored assaults in the conflict. Over the course of 100 hours, his unit destroyed more than 1,000 enemy tanks and captured 11,400 prisoners.

After returning from combat, Fontenot brought that experience back to Fort Leavenworth as director of the School of Advanced Military Studies. He later commanded the 1st Brigade, 1st Armored Division, which was part of the NATO Implementation Force during Operation Joint Endeavor.

Fontenot retired from active duty in 1999 but continued his service as a civilian in various leadership roles over the years. From being an accomplished author to developing innovative programs, his contributions helped shape critical problem-solving methods used in Army planning.

“He reminds us that great leadership isn’t a moment — it’s a lifetime,” Beagle said. “He’s still walking the halls, still mentoring, still inspiring.”

Fontenot expressed gratitude for the honor, especially being recognized alongside Hunt, whom he called “a great American hero.” He also shared his feelings on what it means to be a soldier.

“We are the defenders of a noble dream,” Fontenot said. “We take an oath to the idea of the Constitution of the United States. If that doesn’t make you feel special, I don’t know what does.”

He spoke of his father, a first sergeant who taught him that in the Army, it wasn’t a person’s name or background that mattered, but what that person did with the opportunity he/she was given.

Hall of Fame

The Fort Leavenworth Hall of Fame, established in 1969, recognizes individuals whose service at the post significantly shaped the Army’s history, reputation and mission. With the induction of Hunt and Fontenot, Fort Leavenworth honors both its origins and its ongoing commitment to leadership, education and excellence.

“Hunt forged doctrine that guided generations of artillerymen. Fontenot taught commanders how to think critically in the modern era,” Beagle said. “Together, they embody the intellect, courage and commitment Fort Leavenworth stands for.”

for outstanding achievements in the areas of superior leadership, physical fitness, writing, academic excellence and more.

Maj. Ronald “Ty” Brackin, recipient of the 2025 Lt. Col. Michael “Scott” Flurry Award, said he was honored to be selected for the award, reflecting that it would not have been possible without his classmates.

“Our seminar really came together to support and push each other, and my selection is as much a reflection of our seminar as it is anything,” he said. “We all worked hard to make ourselves and our classmates better this year, and I am continuously impressed by the men and women representing all of the military branches and interagency partners here at SAMS.”

Other awards included the Iron Award, the Iron OPT Award, the Maj. Gen. Edwin Harding Faculty and Student Awards, the Interagency Writing Award, Class Monograph Awards, and the Col. Thomas Felts Leadership Award.

When he enrolled in SAMS, Maj. Khalid Rodriguez expected to gain tools and methodologies to lead planning teams more effectively.

“The reality of the program not only met but exceeded those expectations,” he said. “The depth of the curriculum, the quality of the tools provided, and the opportunity to put theory into practice far surpassed my initial expectations.”

He said his role as class leader enhanced his overall experience.

“I applied and further refined critical leadership attributes I developed during my key developmental assignments — specifically, team building, integration, ruthless prioritization, and creating and sustaining effective processes,” Rodriguez said.

Engagements Lead Maj. Claire Brindle said she would encourage soldiers thinking about SAMS to apply.

“This year was probably one of the most transformative of my career thus far,” she said. “This program equipped me with intellectual tools and operational frameworks necessary to think critically and creatively, plan effectively, and contribute meaningfully at the operational level.”

In addition to the master’s degrees granted in person, nine officers were recognized for completing a doctoral program at a U.S. university through the Advanced Strategic Planning and Policy Program, which was founded by Gen. Raymond T. Odierno in 2012.

About SAMS

SAMS, a part of the Command and General Staff College, educates select armed forces, interagency and allied members to become critical and creative thinkers, agile and adaptive leaders, and skilled practitioners in doctrine and operational art. The goal of SAMS is to enable senior leaders to drive the operations process to achieve favorable strategic, operational, and tactical outcomes.

ASMP is a graduate-level, 11-month program designed for majors, junior lieutenant colonels, select senior warrant officers, and international officers of the armed forces. The program is intended to develop effective planners who engage and enable senior leaders’ understanding of the operational environment further enabling them to visualize and describe viable solutions to complex operational problems.

ASLSP is a graduate-level, 24-month, senior level Army War College program. It is designed to develop theater-level senior leaders and general staff officers for positions of significant responsibility.

ASP3 is a doctoral-level program for select field-grade officers. Officers attend universities of their choice while developing them into strategic leaders through a combination of practical experience, and senior-level professional military education.

HEADS UP

We are all trying to get somewhere, so let's pay attention to each other and get places safely!

Here are few tips for pedestrians and drivers to be aware of when traveling on post.

HEADS UP PEDESTRIANS!

- Walk on sidewalks whenever they are available
- Look up from your phone and pay attention when approaching a crosswalk
- Watch for vehicles turning left or right before you cross
- Whenever possible, cross streets at crosswalks or intersections, where drivers expect pedestrians
- Wear bright or reflective clothing during reduced visibility so drivers can see you

HEADS UP DRIVERS!

- Put away all distractions and pay attention to the road
- Always look out for pedestrians
- Obey the posed speed limit
- Yield to pedestrians in crosswalks
- When opening your vehicle door be alert for bicyclists
- When paralleling a sidewalk and making a right turn, be sure to check your right rear

Government Agency Text Scams

Due to convenience and immediacy in communication offered by text messaging, many people are more likely to readily check these messages and respond quickly as compared to email or answering a phone call. As cybercriminals and scammers are well acquainted with the most effective means to communicate with unsuspecting victims, and due to the proliferation of cell phones (approximately 310 million in the U.S. as of 2024), sending a convincing scam via text can be an effective method for criminal elements to engage unsuspecting individuals. A single reply by one victim can net a cybercriminal hundreds or even thousands of dollars; the potential amounts are even higher with multiple replies.

To add authenticity, scammers often draft a convincing text message purported to come from an official local, state, or federal agency. Some common scam themes include:

- IRS Scam – Often seen during tax season, IRS themed messages request personal information to process a refund or recalculate tax amounts. Payment might be requested to allow the recipient of the text to avoid prosecution or having their social security number canceled.
- Social Security Scam – Frequently targeting older adults, Social Security scammers often revolve around overpayment, suspension of benefits, or requests for additional information necessary for a payment increase.
- U.S. Postal Service – Using notification of an incoming package, scammers request recipients to click on a provided link which then leads to a website requesting personal or financial information.
- Speeding and Parking Ticket Scams – This scam involves a text indicating recipient's vehicle was exceeding the speed limit or parked illegally, and a citation was issued; it then requests payment to avoid a court appearance.
- Jury Duty Text Scam – Seemingly sent from a court with a claim the recipient missed jury duty and is required to pay a fine or provide personal information to avoid jail time or fines.
- Other Government Agency Scams – Within a month of the establishment of the Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE), scammers began targeting government personnel with DOGE themed scams.

Text Scam Protection Tips

- Bear in mind that the IRS does not text taxpayers; the IRS contacts taxpayers through the U.S. Postal Service unless in special circumstances wherein taxpayers would be contacted by phone.
- Do not click on links received in text messages, or reply to text messages, if the sender is unknown or the message looks questionable.
