Army to sunset milSuite April 30

by U.S. Army Public Affairs

WASHINGTON — The milSuite platform — a secure, cloud-based collection of tools for Department of Defense personnel to share information and connect with peers — will be decommissioned on April 30, 2025. On this date, all milSuite products will sunset, including milBook, milUniversity, milSurvey, milTube and milWiki.

After April 30, all milSuite data will be permanently deleted and unrecoverable. Users must personally export or migrate any data they want to preserve to other collaboration capabilities like Army 365 (Teams, SharePoint online). The data on milSuite will not be automatically transferred to another platform. Although no single platform fully replicates milSuite's capabilities, existing resources provide similar collaboration, communication and knowledge-sharing functions.

"Innovations in collaboration, knowledge management and communications offer the DoD approved enterprise tools that better support the Army's digital modernization efforts in line with our goal of a globally connected Army by 2030," said Lt. Gen. Jeth Rey, the Army's deputy chief of staff, G-6.

For additional information, guidance, resources and milSuite alternatives and how to transfer content, visit <https://login.mil-suite.mil/?goto=https%3A> www.milsuite.mil/%3A443%2Fbook%2Fcommunity%2Fmilsuite.

The milSuite data collection points of contact list is also at the website. If you are part of any of the organizations or chains of commands listed in that document and want to ensure your organization is aware of your usage, contact the appropriate individual(s).

The milSuite team will be available on the site to assist with the process.

"We are focused on helping milSuite users understand how to download and export their data over the next few weeks," said Tom Curran, milSuite program manager. "We've established weekly workshops every Thursday at (noon Central Time) that provide a forum to share information and connect our technical experts with our user community to address any questions they have. We've also established a community page containing details, FAQs and resources across each milSuite platform to assist our users."

Due to the short timeline, it is strongly recommended that milSuite users take action as soon as possible to avoid losing important information.

Refer to the milSuite factsheet at <https://api.army.mil/e2/c/downloads/2025/04/11/44d9c17f/army-milsuite-sunset.pdf> and the FAQ page at <https://www.mil-suite.mil/>.

DON'T MIND THE GAP

Military spouse urges potential employers to appreciate that active-duty life IS work experience

by Lisa Smith Molinari/"The Meat and Potatoes of Life" Columnist

A million years ago, I was a litigation attorney with a bright professional future and significant earning potential. That was before I married a Navy man and began moving to U.S. states and foreign countries where my law licenses weren't worth the paper on which they were printed. Despite these challenges, I maintained hope that one day, I'd rekindle my law career. However, military family life marched on, and it wasn't until our youngest entered high school after our ninth move that I drafted a new resumé.

That day, I dropped the kids at school then grabbed the only available table at Starbucks — beside the restrooms. When I had something important to do, I couldn't start until I spent a requisite amount of time dawdling. So, I removed crumpled gum wrappers from my purse, checked e-mail, and people-watched. Although I'd typically procrastinate longer, after 10 minutes I decided that people-watching beside the toilets wasn't entertaining and therefore, not worth the effort.

I opened a blank document, sighed dramatically, and thought, "The kids are old enough now. It's time to find a paying job."

"RESUMÉ [return]... Lisa Smith Molinari," I keyed onto the top of the page. I picked up steam, quickly tapping out my address, phone number and e-mail, adding aesthetically pleasing fonts, underlining and bold. After a few thumps on the return key, I typed "EDUCATION" and enjoyed a trip down memory lane to the ivy-tangled architecture of Miami of Ohio, and the endless racks of thick casebooks at Thomas Cooley Law School in Michigan.

I added "law review" and "cum laude," feeling a surge of confidence.

But, no sooner did I type "WORK EXPERIENCE" when my hands began to tremble. "It's just the caffeine," I thought, and strained to recall the details of my last paying job.

"Hmm ... was it 1995? When I worked for that law firm in California while Francis was assigned to the Naval Postgraduate School? I can't put a job from two decades ago on my resumé ... I'll be a laughing stock!" I realized that, since marrying my Navy husband in 1993, I had not paid "work" experience except a few short-lived legal jobs between military moves. Recognizing that my skinny vanilla latte had nothing to do with my shaking hands, I pressed on, trying my best to make 25 years as a stay-at-home military mom read like a thriving professional career.

As I filled my resumé gap with various volunteer gigs I'd had through the years, I tsked. How is a mil-spouse supposed to convince an employer that she is capable of a challenging job because managing an active-duty military family IS her "work experience"?

Despite the bonbons-and-soap-operas stereotype for stay-at-home-parents, any milspouse who has successfully managed a full household through state-side and overseas moves, lengthy deployments and various TDYs, broken hot water heaters, clogged gutters, HHG damage claims, Scout meetings, soccer tournaments, EFMP paperwork, orthodontist appointments and parent-teacher conferences — is most-definitely worthy of gainful employment.

I resisted the urge to add the cutesy moniker "Domestic Engineer" in hopes that potential employers would respect me for putting my own career aside to help my husband serve his country. Instead, under the heading "REMARKS" I wrote, "Despite gaps in my job history, I have always exemplified hard work and dedication, whether as a lawyer, writer, volunteer, mother or military spouse," pounding the period button with a self-righteous poke.

A few years later, I gave up my job search because each promising lead had ended in final-round rejections due to "lack of work experience." Instead, I co-founded a military non-profit, Orion Military Scholarships, and created my own dream job helping military children find stable educational experiences.

Frankly, I'd grown tired of "mil-splaining" the impact that active-duty Navy life had on my career to civilian employers who would never understand what I knew — that military life requires higher-level competence, determination, selflessness, work ethic, and executive problem-solving skills.

Employers, when considering a military spouse, don't mind the gap. Being frequently moved to new locations, managing complex circumstances, and shepherding a family through constant unknowns gives milspouses the gritty "must-do-can-do-will-do" mentality that you'd do well to appreciate.

WWII pilot laid to rest 80 years after going missing in action

by Prudence Siebert/Fort Leavenworth Lamp Editor

World War II pilot 2nd Lt. John E. McLaughlin Jr. was paid full honors and laid to rest in the Fort Leavenworth National Cemetery July 8, 80 years after going missing in action.

McLaughlin was last seen in 1943, during a mission in Burma (also known as Myanmar in Southeast Asia) with the 436th Bombardment Squadron, 7th Bombardment Group in the Army Air Forces.

“The flight report that was filed was from the plane that had been right next to him, and they watched John fly into a cloud bank — he was gaining speed because he was dropping altitude real quick, and there were three Japanese fighters on his tail at that time. That was the last anyone ever saw him,” his nephew Richard McLaughlin Jr. explained.

McLaughlin was officially accounted for on Jan. 25, 2024, by the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency, using his nephew’s DNA to aid in analysis and identification confirmation. His unidentified remains had originally been moved in 1947 from farmland where his plane went down to the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific, Honolulu, Hawaii.

Richard said it was a given that some-

Local veteran is ‘Miss April’ in 2025 Pin-Ups For Vets calendar

Volunteer partners with organization that strives to help improve veterans’ healthcare, boost morale, honor service

by Prudence Siebert
Fort Leavenworth Lamp Editor

Fort Leavenworth resident Danielle Springall, a U.S. Army veteran who was motivated to enlist after the acts of terrorism on Sept. 11, 2001, continues to find ways to show her patriotism. “I saw the heroism and bravery shown by so many following the tragedy of (9-11), and knew I had to do something, too. Fresh out of high school, and as soon as I turned 18, I chose to join the Army,” said Springall, a former Army medic who served four years on active duty in the Army and then two more years in the Reserves.

Among Springall’s post-Army volunteering contributions, she serves as an ambassador for Pin-Ups For Vets, a nonprofit organization that raises money for veterans’ healthcare and other needs, mostly through the sales of a calendar featuring female veterans decked out in the fancy attire and retro hair and makeup of World War II-era pin-up girls.

After three years of applying to be one of those veteran pin-up girls, Springall was selected to be “Miss April” in the 2025 Pin-Ups For Vets calendar.

“Not only am I absolutely thrilled by what (Pin-Ups For Vets) is doing for the veteran community, but there is nothing I love more than putting a smile on a veteran’s face. Senior enlisted leaders say lethality tied to service members' quality of life

by Matthew Olay/Department of Defense News

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department’s ability to be a lethal fighting force can be linked to the quality of life for America’s warfighters and their families.

Such was the theme embraced by the top enlisted leaders of DoD’s six branches of service during a House Appropriations Committee hearing April 8 in Washington, D.C., on quality of life in the military.

The hearing — which covered a myriad of topics such as pay and compensation, single and accompanied housing, child care, sexual assault prevention and more — provided the senior enlisted leaders with an opportunity to update the committee on the successes and ongoing challenges their respective services face in an ever-challenging fiscal environment.

“I want to start off with the fact that I’m proud of everything that our soldiers have accomplished ... We’re focused on lethality, and we will be ready when the nation calls,” Sgt. Maj. of the Army Michael R. Weimer told the committee

Weimer said that staying focused is paramount to the Army’s success, and maintaining such focus requires continual improvement to the quality of life of its soldiers and their family members.

“(However), continuous resolutions and flat budgets do not support stability or predictability that our soldiers and families deserve,” he said.

Unlike a full budget,

Congress’ passing of continuing resolutions, like the one under which DoD currently operates, can prevent the services from implementing planned future expenditures.

Master Chief Petty Officer of the Navy James Honea shared a similar sentiment to Weimer’s during his opening remarks.

Noting that budget constraints have hindered consistent support for Navy personnel since 2013, Honea said a stable defense budget that invests in sailors, their families and a culture of continued service is necessary.

“I urge Congress to continue investing in our Navy to strengthen our lethality ... and to take care of our warfighters,” Honea told the committee.

Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force David Flosi also said he believes lethality and quality of life are linked.

“While there’s always work to be done on this important subject, make no mistake, your Air Force is the most lethal and ready flying force in the world,” Flosi said.

“Thanks to each of you for your commitment to the quality of life for our service members,” he said. “We need our airmen laser-focused on lethality and readiness, and your support allows us to execute our important mission.”

Lethality is one of five key focus points Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth listed in his Jan. 25, 2025, message to the force (see <https://www.defense.gov/News/Releases/Release/Article/4040940/secretary-hegseths-message-to-the-force/>), along with meritocracy, accountability, readiness and standards.

DFAC facts: ESM, BAS, etc. decoded

by U.S. Army Public Affairs

WASHINGTON — Recent news reports have advanced misleading or incorrect information about the Army’s Basic Allowance for Subsistence, also known as BAS. Several Army senior leaders and subject matter experts have provided insight to better explain how the process works.

The meal card plan is officially titled Essential Station Messing (ESM) in the Army. The Department of Defense requires all services to collect payment for the ESM program to provide to dining facility meal plans for soldiers living in barracks or similar government quarters. Most Army installations with dining facilities (DFACs) require soldiers living in barracks to be on ESM, since many barracks are not equipped for adequate meal preparation. ESM ensures access to meals at DFACs.

Soldiers on ESM status forgo a portion of BAS entitlement for meal plans. The transaction appears on their Leave and Earning Statements, where the BAS reduction for the meal plan is shown, and about $65 is paid directly to the soldiers for their personal use. The Army’s approach to BAS and providing meal plans comes from DoD directives and U.S. law, which is why it is consistent with the other military services.

“A common misconception about BAS is that it goes into a fund that the Army can use at its discretion. That’s not the case,” said Lt. Gen. Brian Eifler, U.S. Army deputy chief of staff, G-1. “There’s no account where the Army stores BAS entitlement funds. And the Army cannot reallocate BAS funds to any other requirements or programs.

“As a matter of fact, if the Army had to depend on ESM BAS to fund the food we provide soldiers, it wouldn’t be enough,” he continued.

Even just accounting for costs like maintaining food service staff, preparing the food, providing a place to eat, equipment and supplies can easily exceed a billion dollars annually. Although the Army pays those kinds of expenses from different appropriations, it’s still part of the total cost of providing food for soldiers.

The Army develops its DFAC budget like the commercial sector. It identifies how much funding it needs to feed soldiers, based on historical patterns of use, to ensure it doesn’t order more than it expects its soldiers will eat. The Army then requests funding from Congress to support the forecasted DFAC requirements.

“However, as we all know, ESM soldiers don’t always eat at the DFAC for any number of reasons,” Eifler said. “It might be because of operational tempo requirements, field exercises, deployments, annual leave and passes or just personal choice.

“But we also know ESM is a critical resource for many soldiers in the barracks. That’s why there’s a significant effort underway to make sure the ESM program meets our soldiers’ needs. That starts with understanding what those needs are and making appropriate adjustments. That’s what Army Materiel Command has been working on.”

AMC is leading food modernization efforts through new initiatives and programs to drive change in how, when and where soldiers eat.

In 2023, the Army established an Army Food Program Board of Directors, which led to a team of experts hitting the road to get feedback from soldiers, culinary specialists and leaders at more than 35 installations. They also partnered with professional chef and author Robert Irvine to serve as a special consultant to the board.

They conducted surveys and focus groups to get soldiers and food service professionals’ perspectives. Flexible options and accessibility, including better operating hours, have been the most requested improvements by soldiers.

In response to the feedback, the Army expanded the use of food trucks, bistros, meal-prep programs and 24-hour self-service kiosks. AMC is also exploring other innovative options, such as campus-style dining models.

“We know we need to change our existing model and launch efforts forward exponentially,” said Lt. Gen. Chris Mohan, AMC deputy commanding general and acting commander of AMC. “We are exploring ways to leverage industry partnerships with culinary experts and are learning lessons from college campuses and other similar food operations to see ourselves from all perspectives.”

This generational overhaul is necessary, Mohan said, to bring dining expectations in line with what troops are telling the Army they want, current industry standards, and, most importantly, what they deserve and what the service owes them.

HEADS UP

We are all trying to get somewhere, so let's pay attention to each other and get places safely!

Here are few tips for pedestrians and drivers to be aware of when traveling on post.

HEADS UP PEDESTRIANS!

- Walk on sidewalks whenever they are available
- Look up from your phone and pay attention when approaching a crosswalk
- Watch for vehicles turning left or right before you cross
- Whenever possible, cross streets at crosswalks or intersections, where drivers expect pedestrians
- Wear bright or reflective clothing during reduced visibility so drivers can see you

HEADS UP DRIVERS!

- Put away all distractions and pay attention to the road
- Always look out for pedestrians
- Obey the posted speed limit
- Yield to pedestrians in crosswalks
- When opening your vehicle door be alert for bicyclists
- When paralleling a sidewalk and making a right turn, be sure to check your right rear

Cybercrime Prevention Flyer Government Agency Text Scams

Due to convenience and immediacy in communication offered by text messaging, many people are more likely to readily check these messages and respond quickly as compared to email or answering a phone call. As cybercriminals and scammers are well acquainted with the most effective means to communicate with unsuspecting victims, and due to the proliferation of cell phones (approximately 310 million in the U.S. as of 2024), sending a convincing scam via text can be an effective method for criminal elements to engage unsuspecting individuals. A single reply by one victim can net a cybercriminal hundreds or even thousands of dollars; the potential amounts are even higher with multiple replies.

To add authenticity, scammers often draft a convincing text message purported to come from an official local, state, or federal agency. Some common scam themes include:

- IRS Scam – Often seen during tax season, IRS-themed messages request personal information to process a refund or recalculate tax amounts. Payment might be requested to allow the recipient of the text to avoid prosecution or having their social security number cancelled.
- Social Security Scam – Frequently targeting older adults, Social Security scammers often revolve around overpayment, suspension of benefits, or requests for additional information necessary for a payment increase.
- U.S. Postal Service – Using notification of an incoming package, scammers request recipients to click on a provided link which then leads to a website requesting personal or financial information.
- Speeding and Parking Ticket Scams – This scam involves a text indicating recipient's vehicle was exceeding the speed limit or parked illegally, and a citation was issued; it then requests payment to avoid a court appearance.
- Jury Duty Text Scam – Seemingly sent from a court with a claim the recipient missed jury duty and is required to pay a fine or provide personal information to avoid jail time or fines.
- Other Government Agency Scams – Within a month of the establishment of the Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE), scammers began targeting government personnel with DOGE-themed scams.

Text Scam Protection Tips

- Bear in mind that the IRS does not text taxpayers; the IRS contacts taxpayers through the U.S. Postal Service unless in special circumstances wherein taxpayers would be contacted by phone.
- Do not click on links received in text messages, or reply to text messages, if the sender is unknown or the message looks questionable.

REAL ID Driver License

A REAL ID is usually marked by a GOLD STAR in the upper-right hand corner, depending on the issuer.

- Meets the new federal security standards
- May be used to board domestic flights
- Enter MILITARY BASES, secure federal facilities, and nuclear power plants starting May 7, 2025
- Anyone coming onto base as a sponsored guest after the deadline will need a Real ID.
- U.S. Department of Defense ID, including IDs issued to dependents are considered to be Real ID compliant.

Standard Driver License

It will not have a gold star marking in the upper-right hand corner. If you plan to fly domestically, a REAL ID is recommended.

- Does not meet the new federal security standards
- Cannot use to board domestic flights starting after the new May 7, 2025 deadline
